

A Presentation on Presentation

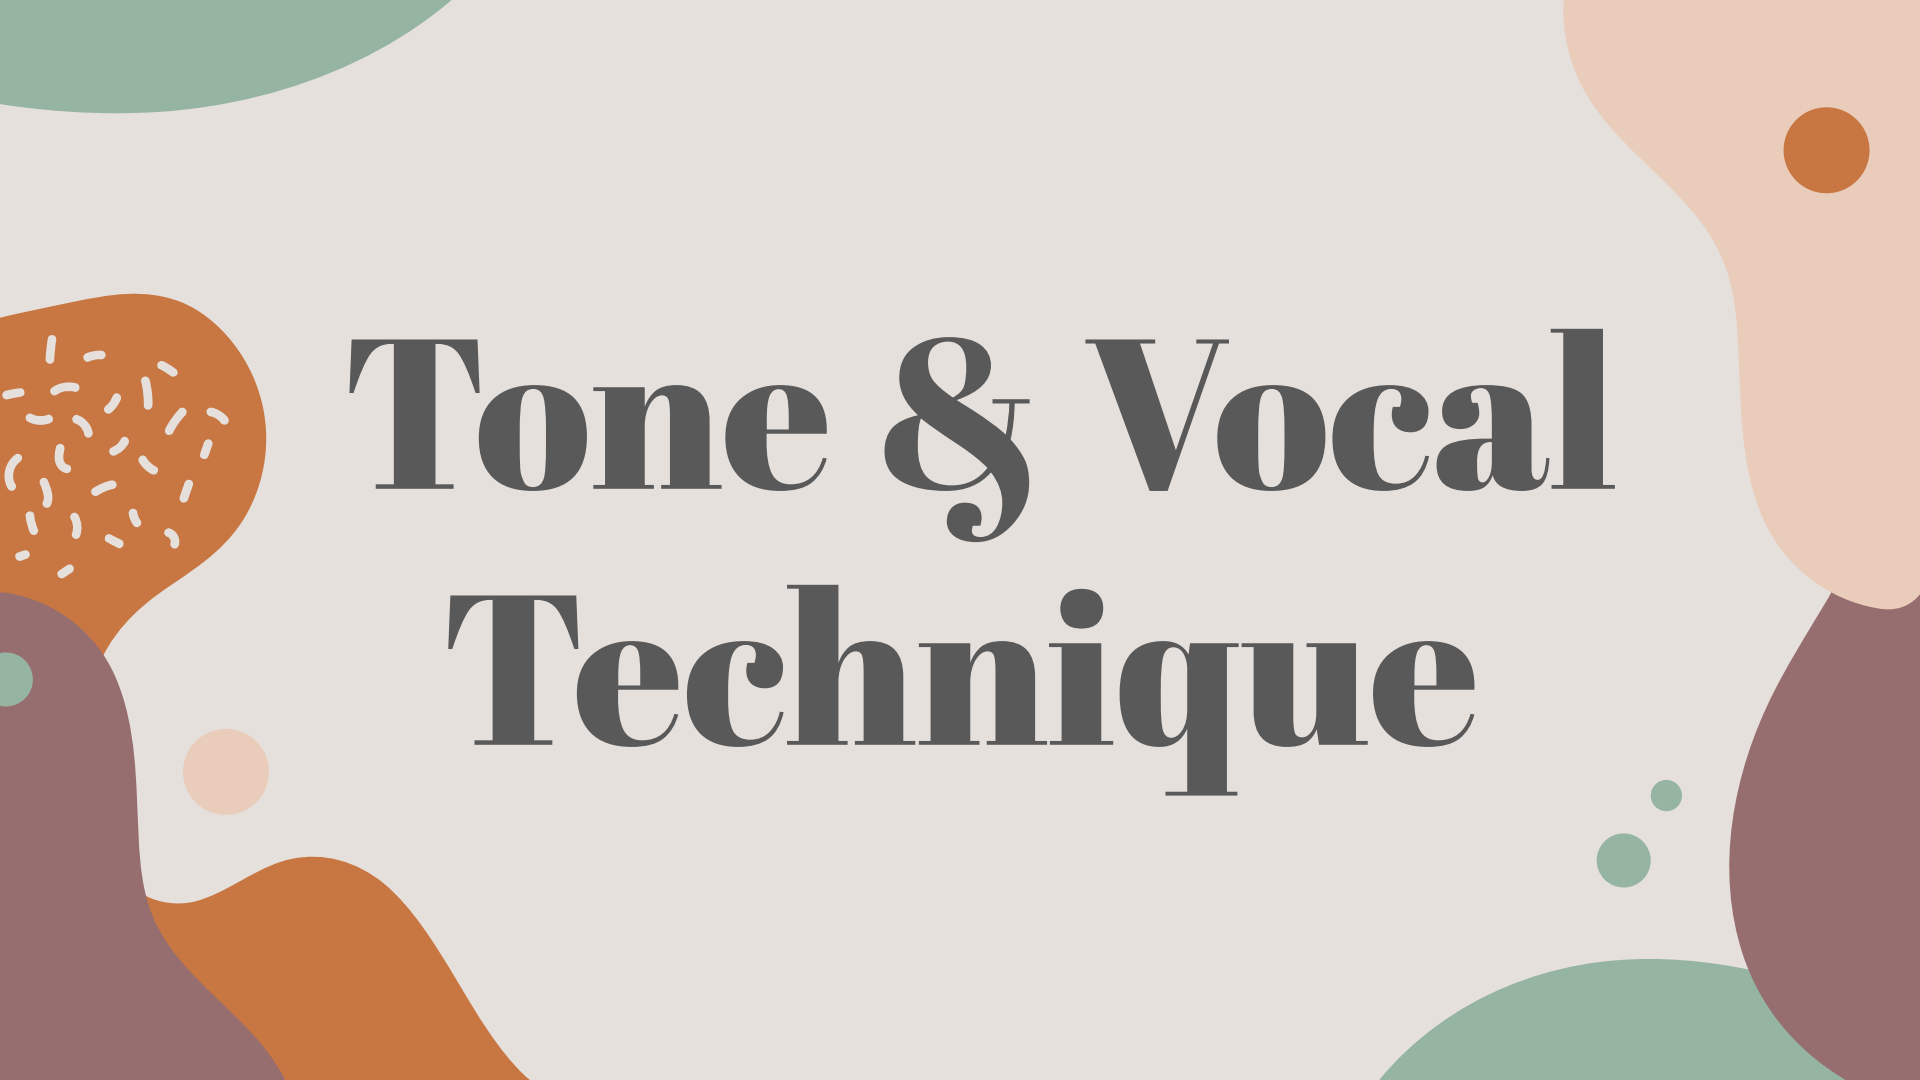

A guide to delivering speeches online AND in-person

What are elements of a well-delivered speech?

In no particular order...

- Confidence
- Authenticity
- Tonal variation
- Simplicity
- Clarity
- Passion
- Fluency
- Rhetoric
- Effective gesturing

Tone & Vocal Technique

Objectives

1. Sound like yourself
2. Sound like you care
3. Sound confident
4. Be understandable

All of this helps you to be more memorable and enhance your judge's understanding of your content.

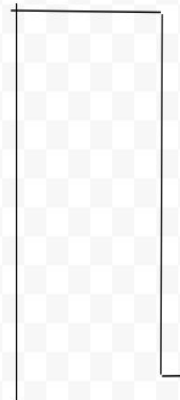

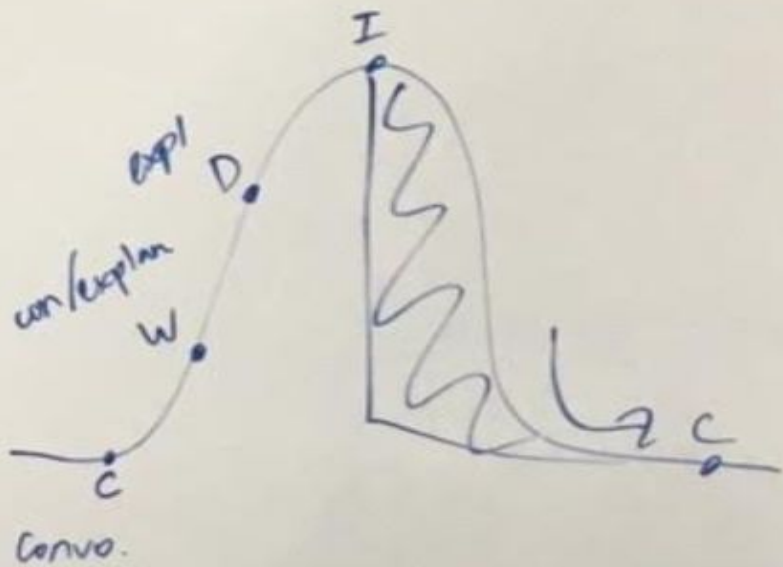

Sounding Like Yourself

Dos

- Amplify your conversational voice
- Learn from others - don't copy them
- Recognize natural patterns in your voice and practice them

Donts

- Unnecessarily change the pitch of your voice
- Force a vocabulary of overly complicated words
- Be overly aggressive
- Have a debate voice

What not to sound like in a speech

Why is this wrong?

The difference between everyone in this call and Chris Murphy is that we pretend to play a direct part in federal policymaking in America, while he actually plays a part in it.

So what happens when you try to do what Murphy just did? Three things:

1. You're overdoing it. If you try to use this much passion and emphasis constantly, your judge ends up missing the parts of your speech that are the most important.
2. You end up demonizing the other competitors in the round. Your job is to sound more rational than everyone else, not angrier. Your judge won't like it if you sound like this, especially in questioning when you directly interact with other competitors.
3. Your taking advantage of the people affected by your speech. If you're exaggerating emotions in your speech, it sounds less like you actually care about the issue and more like you only care about the rank.

Overall, the person with the best presentation in this event is the person who finds the best balance in tonal variation, body language, and hand gestures. You don't want to sound indifferent to the issue at hand, but you don't want to sound like Chris Murphy does either.

What are ways
you can sound passionate?

Sounding Like You Care

Dos

- Vary your tone for emphasis
 - And ensure changes in tone are moderate and natural
- Vary the speed of your delivery
- Create a “vocal roadmap”
- Believe what your saying and care about the issues you’re talking about

Donts

- Keep one tone for your whole speech
- Start your speech off with the tone you should reserve for points of emphasis

What are ways
you can sound
confident?

Sounding Confident

Dos

- Be yourself <3 and know ur deserving of everyone's attention while u speak
- Annunciate
- Take your time
- Listen to music before round or wtv else you need to calm ur nerves

Donts

- End statements like questions
- Apologize if you don't need to
- Rush through your walkup

How can you maximize the clarity of your speeches?

Sounding Simple

Dos

- Have a clear warrant and impact
- Use humanized language
- Use transitional phrases
- Have analysis after your evidence

Donts

- Use big words for no reason
- Sound like an essay
- Assume your judges know what you mean (to an extent ofc)
- Have run-on sentences

Visual Aspects of Delivery

Online

- Look at the CAMERA, especially during emotion-filled parts of your speech (impacting, an impassioned intro, etc.)
- Gesture for emphasis
 - Raise your hands
- Minimize the size of your speech doc, so even when you are reading, it's not as obvious
- OR... if you are reading from a pad, hold the pad at an angle so that when you are reading from your pad, you're still facing the direction of the camera
- Place your camera at an angle relatively level with your face
- Light source should be in front, not behind you if possible

In-Person

- Signposting
- Hold your pad in one hand, gesture in the other
- Pad by your side during intros, claims, and impacts→ eye-contact with judges/room
- Watch out for excessive gesturing + fidgeting
 - Hold your hand by your side until you make the conscious decision to gesture for emphasis
- Use body language to direct your attention to others in the room in correspondence with your actual content/what's going on in the round
- Don't rush through your walk-up (We'll discuss more later)

Common Denominators

- Purposeful gesturing
- Make eye contact for greater emotional connection
- Even if you are reading, try to be a little more discreet about it
- Appear physically put together + confident
 - Posture

Speaking
Extemporaneously
& Padding
Speeches

- Cloning 80s any f size
- Predictable single, high school remote + minimum wage
- off - more magic - ignore major flaws that enable any don
- not a movie, not any gets happy ending

Roll back tape on debate → Davis + ↓ poverty BUT x jobs

- Zhang → CSR study, millions job losses
- When business can't afford [THE ONES THAT CAN]
- WILL NOT AUTOMATE LOW SKILLED JOBS

Forbes 2017 found that 1 min wage ↓ automobile employment held by low skilled workers

Brooklyn 2014 - 88% of US jobs could be replaced by machines

A: fears → gives employers push to PERMANENTLY replace Continuing, pushing workers into the streets + into poverty
Davis + Hanson, SOME see rise in wage doesn't make it. f. millions have NO WAGE b/c companies not to ↓ labor costs or cut off

Even in off best case of off + no jobs are lost, FAIL

W: Negate b/c companies will change worker status of employees to independent contractors to keep them underpaid, slashing benefits in process

E: Rep. for professional employees gone w/b → business short on funds, systematically convert employees to I.C.s TO AVOID MIN WAGE

E: IRS → millions of employees have ALREADY sacrificed b/c contracts are not protected by min wage + benefits

A: fore business to pay debt → sacrifice to cut labor costs

E: Some 2016 report → FedEx cut its labor costs by 40% by modifying

I: ~~corporate~~ lose life saving benefits - underpaid - millions who rely on employee sponsored healthcare stand to lose it Isn't a s.w. screen worth it, f.!

Padding your speeches

- Write as little as you can
 - Write in shorthand
 - Leave room to insert refutation/weighing/round integration
 - Optional - write analysis in round so you can adapt your argument and its explanation to what ppl are saying better
- Use different colors to your advantage
 - Associate colors with different parts of your speech to help with emoting
 - Use contrasting colors to better tell which part of your speech you're on
- Do NOT read your intro off your pad
 - But u can have little notes jic u forget it and need to glance
- Pad your speeches right before or during round to help you remember

*Novices may print speeches, but speeches should still be on one page. Leave space for refutations and changes.

When in questioning...

Do:

- Use an informative & friendly tone
 - ASKING: Sound like you're asking to know more, even if you're not
 - ANSWERING: Calmly reaffirming your logic to combat questioner
- Use humor or sarcasm when appropriate
- Be concise and question the warrant

Don't:

- Be rude, dismissive or condescending
- Yell over the other person

Drills

- If you're having trouble speaking conversationally, talk about your day then go straight into delivering your intro.
- If you're sounding monotonous/bored/not passionate, give a speech like a newscaster with consistent and repetitive inflections in your tone. Then practice giving a speech with more deliberate vocal inflections.
- If you're having trouble with word economy, give yourself less and less time to explain a point to force yourself to cut out unnecessary words (go from 2 minutes to 1 minute to 30 seconds to 15 seconds).
- If you're having trouble with pad reliance/speaking extemporaneously, use only half of your legal pad to write your speech. Then give the speech with no pad (minus evidence).
- If you're having trouble varying your tone, give entire speeches in one tone (concerned/urgent/conversational) and then try inserting varying tones into the speech.
- If you're having trouble with speed, record yourself and keep trying until you slow down OR have a partner stop you and make you restart if you're going too fast.
